A Calmer Dog and a More Confident Family

Structure Begins the Rebuild

Structure gives your dog a clear, predictable way to move through everyday life. Instead of making every decision independently, your dog learns to look to you for guidance.

You become the trusted decision-maker. Your dog gains clearer expectations, fewer opportunities to make poor choices, and more chances to succeed.

Training Builds Reliable Skills

We return to the essential skills families need most and practice them until they become dependable in real life:

- Remain down until released
- Settle calmly on place
- Come when called
- Walk calmly beside you until released

These skills are practiced through structure, routine, repetition and real-world experience – not only in controlled training sessions. The goal is reliability that carries over into your home and daily life.

Reliable Communication Creates Freedom

Remote-collar communication provides a clear and dependable way to communicate at a distance. Combined with the skills your dog has learned, it allows you to test reliability and safely increase freedom.

Freedom is not given all at once. It grows as your dog demonstrates responsibility.

The end result is a dog who can enjoy being a dog – and a family that feels confident including them in more of life.

Your dog learns. You learn, too.

Freedom Through Responsibility is designed for family pet dogs with common problem behaviors. The 21-day board-and-train develops the dog while Your Freedom Valve™ develops the owner. Dogs with human aggression are not eligible.

The dog side

The focus is canine resilience, stability, and a calmer state of mind while teaching the basics very well:

- 01 Be still
Settle when nothing is needed.

- 02 Walk calmly with me
Move together with clarity and connection.

- 03 Come when called
Build dependable recall and work toward on- and off-leash reliability.

Training uses structure, routine, repetition, real-world practice, and fun off-leash adventures, including hiking as skills develop.

Meet Your Freedom Valve™.

Your Freedom Valve™ is a moment-by-moment blueprint for deciding how much guidance or freedom your dog is ready for. It replaces guessing with a clear, responsible next step.

Structured Movement > Reliability Testing > Supervised Freedom

1. Structured Movement

Begin with clear guidance and purposeful movement. You create structure your dog can understand and stop wondering what to do first.

2. Reliability Testing

Learn when and how to test your dog's skills. Decisions are based on what your dog shows you, not hope or pressure.

3. Supervised Freedom

Freedom grows as reliability is demonstrated. You stay involved, make the decision, and give your dog more life without giving up responsibility.

Compatibility call

We begin with a free phone conversation about your dog, your family's needs, and my approach. The purpose is to decide whether moving forward is a good fit. If we are compatible, the pre-program meet-and-greet is included in the program.

48-hour suitability review

During the first 48 hours, I observe how your dog responds when structure limits their choices. Occasionally, aggression that was not previously seen or disclosed appears. If I determine that the program is not a suitable fit, I will refer your dog to a better-fit program. Program payments will be refunded, less $300. This is rare.

Overnight boarding

Overnight boarding is available for all post-program dogs and compatible dogs that are crate trained and house trained. A pre-boarding meet-and-greet is required. Boarding is $45 per night and booked separately, subject to availability.

Three forms of communication

I teach through leash guidance, verbal markers, and remote-collar communication. Methods and expectations are discussed before enrollment so you understand how your dog will learn and how you will participate.
